THE RANDELL DIVORCE SUIT. Married Before and Has Married Again Since-Alleged Conspiracy his Defence.

To any, and all whom it may concern, that I George D. Randell of the city of Newark and State of New Yerrey do hereby by these presant take Emelline Moore-croft to be my lawfully wedded wife from this day and henceforth forever untill Death do us part to be to her the same and in all ways as if toined together by the hollest lies of our church; and as I keep this yow and death her in the true letter and spirit thereof, so may the Almighty deat by me:

Witness-Rachell D. Brooke.

Exeline F. Randell.

Exeline F. Randell.

Emeline is suing George in the Supreme Court, before Judge Patterson, to establish; by getting an absolute divorce, that her marriage was lawful, and that her children are legitimate. A jury had been obtained vesterday when Juror No. 6 stood up and asked:

"Do I understand that this is a divorce case?"
"It is," said Lawyer William Mitchell for the plaintiff.

"Well, I am prejudiced against divorce," said the juror, and he was excused. Luwyer Mitchell, in opening the case, said said that the parties became acquainted in the summer of 1880, and continued their friendly relations until the 17th of February, 1881, when they agreed to enter into a written contract of marriage, which was witnessed by the plaintiffs sister. Randell requested that the marriage should be kept secret, and it was until the following May, when he introduced her as his wife. He lived in her parents house as her husband. Just before the birth of a child, Mr. Randell, under pretence that he wanted to file the marriage contract, got it from her, but luckly she had made a copy of it before delivering it up. About Feb. 22, 1883, Mr. Randell became tired of this young woman, refused to contribute to her support, and attempted to repudiate the marriage. In the summer of 1883 he acquired possession of certain letters which he had written to her in which he addressed her as "Mrs. George D. Randell." He subsequently entered into marriage relations with Miss Nettly Wyman, with whom he is now living.

Before any testimony was taken Mr. William Fullerton, counsel for the defendant, insisted that all the witnesses for the plaintiff should leave the room, following that request up with the statement:
"We expect to expose a very great conspirelations until the 17th of February, 1881,

"We expect to expose a very great conspiracy in this case."

The witnesses left the room, and Mrs, Emeline F. Randell, whose maiden name was Moorecroft, was called. She had been sitting in court, with a girl baby in her lap. She is a comely looking woman, about 30. She told her story plainly and explicitly. She said that in June, 1889, she first met Mr. Randell at Coney Island, being introduced to him by a Mr. Whitfield. The next time she saw him was about two weeks later at her home. Friendly relations continued to exist between them until February of the following year, when a proposition of marriage was made by him. He called at her house in February and told her sister that he and Emma had come to the conclusion to get married, "provided that she was satisfied to sign a contract that he had brought with him." He said that he could not very well be married by a clergyman, on account of his eldest daughter, who was soon to be married, and on that account he wanted the marriage kept secret. If he got married by a clergyman it would not be.

We read the contract and signed it. He said that his eldest daughter, who was of such a disposition and mind that we could never get along together, and that he would take me home with him. He had mo fear about the youngest child, and thought I could get along with her. We read the contract. He had no fear about the youngest child, and thought I could get along with her. We read the contract. He had mo fear about the youngest child, and thought I could get along with her. We read the contract. He had mo fear about the youngest child, and thought I could get along with her. We read the contract to Respect that she there may sister, He gave the contract to me but subsequently asserted provered my right above produced.

In May or June, 1881, while she lived with her parents at 378 Dean street, Brooklyn, he called at the house. Taking her by the arm in the presence of her mother, he said: "Mrs. Moorecroft, I hope you won't think I have been naughty. Emma and I have been getting married."

Mamma says, "How long have you been married!" nd he says, "Since Feb. 17." Mamma says, "Where erer you married!" and he answered, "li Brooklyn." famma says, "Emma is old enough to judge for her-elf, and if she is satisfied I am."

Mrs. Randell testified that Mr. Randell did not live with her continuously in Brooklyn on account of his business in Newark, as he told her. Finnlly, in 1883, she discovered that he had narried another woman, and was living with her. He remained away for some time, and on the 22d of February, in answer to a letter sent by her, she met him at Cortlandt street ferry. Bhe was accompanied by her sister.

If told me: "I have come to the conclusion that I will to nothing more for you." I says: "You have?" He aid: "Yes; our marriage is no marriage at all. It is not binding in Jersey. You will have to try me in Jersey, and I don't care for Jersey Judge or Jersey jury. I am ot any white necktie churchgoer, to be afraid of publicity." I says: "Suppose I take you to New York for rial?" and he says: "Bo what you please." Before he fift he said: "Won't you kiss me good by!"
"No, sir; I won't," I says.

"No, sir, I won't," I says.

She testified that two children were born to her, one of which died. She also mentioned instances when and where and to whom he had introduced her as his wife.

Upon cross-examination by Mr. Fullerton Mrs. Randell admitted that she had told Mr. Randell that she had given birth to a child of which an actor was the father. But she says she told Mr. Randell this before the contract was signed.

which an actor was the father. But she says she told Mr. Randell this before the contract was signed.

When he proposed marriage I told him I would have to take time to consider it, and the next time he came I confessed it. In the letters which I wrote to him I addressed him as "Dear George."

Mr. Fullerton introduced a contract purporting to be signed by the plaintiff granting George D. Randell a release from the marriage agreement and from all responsibility for the children born during his union with Mrs. Randell for a consideration of $1,000. The paper was shown to the witness. She said that she had signed it, but before it was filled in, and that she never knew its contents. All of this occurred at Newark, where at the same time she received $1,000 for the support and expenses of herself and child.

Mr. Fullerton asked if she had ever been arrested for shoplifting. To this she replied that she had, but it was all a conspiracy, and that she had been honorably discharged. No indictment was ever found against her.

A number of letters were shown to the witness and she was asked whether or not she had written them. She read them over carefully, and then answered emphatically that she had not written them, although the writing was much like hers.

Mrs. Rachel D. Brooke, the plaintiff's sister, corroborated her sister as to the signing of the marriage contract. She knew that they lived together at her mother's house as man and wife. They occupied the back parlor.

Mr. Fullerton asked this witness if she was married. She said she was, but had been separated from her husband four years.

Mrs. Theresa Moorecroft, mother of plaintiff, testified that Mr. Randell and her daughter occupied the back parlor of her residence. Randell, she said, sometimes came to the house once of twice a week and sometimes oftener. The witness testified that she had never signed any paper releasing Mr. Randell from responsibility as to her daughter.

Cross-examined—were you divored from your husand? A—No.

bility as to her daughter.

Gross-examined-Were you divorced from your husband? A.—No.

Q.—Was he divorced from you? A.—No.

Q.—Well, I have here the papers in a suit brought by your husband against you for divorce. A.—He did commence an action, but could not prove his charge and withdrew the suit.

Q.—Are you living with your husband now? A.—Yes, sir. He always has lived with me. He supports me, my children, and my grandchildren, as Mr. Randell ought to do for his wife and child.

gir. He always has lived with me. He supperts me, any children, and my grandchildren, as Mr. Randell ought to do for his wife and child.

The plaintiff was recalled and exhibited the wedding ring and a gold chain that Mr. Randell is said to have given her.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin N. Burnie and Marie Louise Kendall, who stated that she was an elocutionist, testified that Mr. Randell had spoken of the plaintiff as his wife and had often spoken of going to housekeeping. This closed the plaintiff's case.

Until this time it had been supposed that Randell was not in court, but ou being recalled Mr. Burnie pointed out a baid-freaded, neatly-drossed man who sat a short distance from Mr. Fullerton as the defendant, Mr. Fullerton in his opening address for the defence said that the case was the result of a masked conspiracy on the part of the plaintiff to make out a marriage that never did exist and could not have existed. The only witness examined before the adjournment was B. F. Strauss of 111 First place, Brooklyn, who was employed by Mrs. Handell in drawing up the alleged release to Mr. Randell. He stated that the plaintiff knew what she was signing, and that both her father and mother signed similar documents, the former with his mark and the latter by proxy. Before the settlement, which he and Judge McCarter of Newark effected, he had never heard of the pretended marriage between Miss Moorecroft and Mr. Randell.

In consequence of the conflicting reports that Mead in White Plains, District Attorney Baker conclud-Mead in White Fishina District Attorney Baker concluded to lay the case before the Grand Jury. All the witnesses of the trazedy were subpernaed and the story of the shoots the bullets out of the young men's heads, testified that they were of the same calliers respectively as the bullets in the chambers of the recovers that the young men carried. There was also the testimony of Chief See, John McAllister, and itsoar Wells, who were convinced from the actions of the two when they fell that they shot themselves. The Grand Jury made no presentment. The inference in White Flains is that the juryors thought it was case of whiche. GEN. BUTLER TACICLES LESTER.

An All-day Cross-ext mins then to Show the he is Not Entitled to Damages. Gen. Butler continued his cross-examination yesterday of John H. L. ester, who is suing him for $100,000 in the Unite d States Court for alloged false imprisonme at i n 1864, while Gen. Butler was in command at Fortress Monroe, Gen. Butler presented maz y written documents to the witness, obtal aed his identification, and then read them to 1 he jury. Most of them were in Mr. Lester's ha adwriting. They were found in Mrs. Lester's trunk, and they told of dealings in iron, dry goods, and ma-chinery for the manufacture of arms. A proposition that the Union M. was facturing Com-pany should after arms to. the Confederates was read and Mr. Lester said it was written by himself for S.C. Robinson. Re telpts for tobacc valued at over $30,000 indicat ed that Mr. Les ter had dealt in tobacco, and the bills showed that he had loaned thousands of dollars to S. C. Robinson. In a list of sub scribers to the Union Manufacturing Company, Mr. Lesterwas was down for 150 shares. He was the superintendent. Gen. Butler read four receipts for shares purchased by Mr. Lester a ltogether fo shares purchased by Mr. Lester a ltogether for $9,650. A letter written by S. C. 1 bobinson expressed Mr. Robinson's opinion that Mr. Lester on account of his superior skill a vas entitled to half of the profits of the Union M anufacturing Company.

Then Gen. Butler said he would proceed to show that Mr. Lester was engaged in blockade running. He read an inventory of galods sufficient to stock a hig dry goods store. Mr. Lester said that the list was copied by himself for a Mr. Monenstle, a Richmond merchant, to whom he had lent money. A memorandum stated that Gen. Butler had conflicted was the property of Mr. Lester, and which was the property of Mr. Lester when he was sentenced to prison.

Q.—During the interview that we had when you first came, didn't Mr. Davenport come in with a telegraph despatch and then ake notes of our conversation! A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Didn't I order you under arrest after the second interview only! Tolid you I had heard something about your business in Richmond, and at the second interview I questioned you more closely? A.—Yes.

Mr. Lester's counsel—Cheat?

"I said cheat," thundered the General.

A.—You asked if I did not mean to cheat one Government or the other.

Q.—Didn't I ask you how I was to know that you would not try to cheat the United States Government just as you said to me you had cheated the Confederate Government? You came through the lines at Martinaburg, Va., as a refugee? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't I say that you were a dangerous man, and that I would keep you a prisoner until the war was over?

A.—Yes.

A—You kindly and con-siderately furnished me counsel. Gen. Butler asked the witness whether by kindly and considerately" the witness was fronical or not. The witness said he was fronical, and the General said he was glad that point was clear, and asked whether he had borne the witness any malice. The witness said he heard that the General bore him malice because he, Mr. Butler, appointed an old friend and chum of his and paid him $100 to be counsel for Mr. Lester. Gen. Butler remarked that the record would show, and Mr. Lester retorted:

"You had the record made out differently."
Mr. Lester added that he signed the defence which his lawyer made because the lawyer told him that he would be compelled to sign it.

OFFERS HIS NECK TO THE NOOSE Shipman's Startling Plea of Guilty of Murder

A plea of guilty to an indictment for murder in the first degree, startled the Court of General Sessions yesterday. Henry Shipman, the young man who on Feb. 3 shot and killed his landlady, Mrs. Josephine Mason, at 339 East Thirty-first street, was the indicted man. Howe & Hummel appeared as his counsel in the Police Court and said he was insane, but nobody appeared for him yesterday. When his name was called he walked from the pen down to the bar and stood up, hat in hand, uncon-cernedly. Clerk Hall, holding the indictment in his hand, turned to him:
"The Grand Jury has found a true bill against you, Henry D. Shipman," he said, "for

The Grand Jury has found a true bill against you, Henry D. Shipman," he said, "for the murder of Josephine Mason. How say you are you guilty or not guilty?" "Guilty," said Shipman, coolly. It was perhaps the first time in the flistery of the court that a man had ever so pleaded guilty, and left the Court no option but to sentence him to death if his plea were accepted. Everybody else in the court room started, but the prisoner repeated his plea, and stood up unmoved. The Recorder was about the first person to recover himself.

"Where is this man's counsel?" he asked. "Hasn't he got any? Then I shall assign him one. I shall not accept such a plea; endorse the indictment with the plea 'Not guilty.' Mr. Hall. The prisoner is remanded."

Shipman was taken back to the Tombs, and will be tried at some future date. It was supposed by many in court that he had pleaded guilty merely to back up the assumption of insanity. The plea was a perfectly safe one to make, for no Judge would receive it under similar circumstances.

Mr. Sparks, who has been Clerk of the Court of Oyer and Terminer and of the General Sessions, said that no such plea had ever been made within his recollection. He thought he plea was made to carry out the claim of insanity.

Ex-Alderman Michael Duffy, one of the main-stays of the prosecution of the "boodlers," was sur-rendered to the Sheriff yesterday morning by Bobert Boyd, one of his bondamen, who has been aching for some time to get off his bond. Yesterday morning Mr. some time to get off his bond. Yesterday morning Mr. Boyd went to Duffy's house with City Marshal Manchester and took the ex-Alderman down to the District Attorney's office. There, in Mr. Nicoll's room, the dethrough with the Unger trial. Mr. Martine pornited him to go home.

"I don't know positively why Mr. Boyd surrendered him." Mr. Martine said. "I believe, however, he had a quarrel with Mr. Maguire, another bondsman, who is Duffy's brother-in-law. I have given Mr. Duffy until Friday to get $5,000 new ball. He is still under $20,000 ball. Duffy's interest is to stay here; if he made any move to so I could try him; as long as he stays here and keeps faith with us, although there are two indictments over him, of course I could not move a trial."

Duffy is indicted for taking bribes to vote for the Broadway railroad and the Thirty-fourth street road.

A Dangerous Copperfeit.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 15.—The United States Mint here to-day secured a counterfeit $2.50 gold piece of 1852, for which it has been in quest for years for the purpose of completing its cabinet. It was presented to Su-perintendent Fox by L. H. Taylor & Co., the bankers who got it in a lot $10,000 from the Sub-Treasury yesterday The gold was forwarded to New York in the afternoon The gold was forwarded to New York in the afternoon, and this one piece was returned this morning as a conterfeit. At the Philadelphia bank it was pronounced genuine, and the acid test at the sole Freasury failed to show it anything but good. At the mink, however, the assayer declared it a counterfeit—one of the most dangerous powers gold south of the most dangerous powers gold south of the treatable on the weight is that of the real article to a hair. Its size is exactly the same, save that the genuine coin is slightly thinner at the middle than the counterfeit, and if has the true ring of the pure metal. We have been looking for an example of this counterfeit for ten or fifteen years to place in our cabinet here. I readily recognized it by the head upon it. That style head of Liberty was not printed upon the $2.50 pieces of 1852."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—An amendment to the River and Harbor bill introduced by Senator Van Wyck to-day by request, authorizes John Cowdon and his associates to construct at their own expense an outlet for the flood waters of the Mississippi River from a point ten miles below New Orleans to Lake Borgne. For each foot of digregore between the flood lines of the river foot of digregore between the flood lines of the river ten mies below New Oricans to Lake Rorgno. For each foot of difference between the flood lines of the river brought about by the outlet project Cowdon is to receive $500,000. One-half of the money is to be retained by the Secretary of War, however, until a low water navigable channel ten feet in depth is secured for the entire distance between New Orleans and Cairo, Ill. In case the depth of the channel is increased beyond ten feet for the entire distance from New Orleans and Cairo by reason of the outlet, the sum of $2.084,000 is to be paid for each additional foot of navigable depth secured.

Sudden Appearance of an Ice-cold Spring

TYRONE. Pa., Feb. 15 .- On Saturday two citi-THONE, I'a., Feb. 10.—On Saturday two citizens of this place were talking in the street near the public buildings, when suddenly, in the middle of the roadway, water began to gush up from the ground in a stream four or five inches in diameter. In a short time it wore a channel for itself six feet deep, and is flooding the surroundings with its overflow. The water is as cold as ice, and to all appearances is an inexhaustic spring. The phenomenon has been visited by hundreds of people since its sudden and startling appearance.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 15 .- The friends of Milton Weston, the Chicago capitalist who was convicted of maniaughter, in being accessory to the death of a man during a fight for a gas well in Westmoreland county, will neally present his case to the Pardon Board at Harrishurs to day. A pardon was refused Weston in December last, and he now wants a rehearing. Petitions signed by thousands of citizens of illinois have been sent to the Board asking for his pardon.

STARTED HIS ENGINE WHILE ASLESS

ious Mishap at Seranton Recal Terrible Enlirond Catastrophe. SCRANTON, Feb. 15 .- Late Saturday night Dennis Mack, engineer on a switch engine in the yards of the Lackawanna Iron and Coal Company in this city, ran his engine into the engine house. As he was to go on duty again at 1 o'clock Sunday morning he lay down in the cab of his engine to sleep until that time. Just before 1 o'clock workmen in the yard were startled by a great crash at the engine house, which is a frame building. Looking in the direction of the house they saw one side of it give way and Mack's engine come tearing out of the breach. The engine ran a short distance over the ground and then toppled over down an embankment twenty feet high. It rolled over and over in the descent, and badly wrecked. The workmen knew that down an embankment twenty feet high. It rolled over and over in the descent, and was badly wrecked. The workmen knew that Mack was on the engine, and expected to find him crushed to death in the debris. They found him fast in the wreck, and although he was held so that it took them some time to extricate him, he was found to have received but a few slight injuries. Mack could not explain what caused the engine to start, but it is supposed that he started up in his sleep and pulled the throttle open.

This singular occurrence recalls the fact that one of the most terrible railroad disasters that ever occurred in this country was caused by an engineer starting his engine while he was asleen. It was in July, 1869, on the Eric Railway, at Mast Hope station, on the Delaware division. The track was then a single one on that part of the road. Conductor Jud Brown had orders to lie on the switch at Mast Hope until fast express train No. 3, west bound, passed. James Griffin was the engineer of the freight train. As the express rain approached the station at midnight, running thirty-five miles an hour. Conductor Brown was horrified to see his train pulling out on the main track. Griffin's engine reached the main track directly in front of the express, and a terrific collision was the result. The cars on the express train were piled on top of one another and caught fire. Many passengers were killed outright. A dozen others were held in the wreck and burned alive. The depot caught fire and was loaged in the Pike county jail. He was tried for manslaughter in September, 1869. He was defonded by the late Chief Justice George W. Woodward. It was proved on the trial that he had been on duty twenty-four hours without sleep, and the point made by the defence was that while waiting on the switch he was overcome by the strain and fell asleep. He was partially awakened by the Justice George W. Woodward. It was proved on the trial that he had been on duty twenty-four hours without sleep, and the point made by the defence was that whil

THE CASE OF AN AGED GENTLEMAN.

Mr. R. S. B. Hatch of Lebanon Springs, N.Y., is now 2 years of age. There is nothing remarkable in this fact in itself, but taken in connection with others it is. In a letter dated Nov. 10, 1885, he says:

"I had suffered from liver complaint for thirty years. None of my physicians were able to give me more than transient relief. Three years ago I had a stroke of apoplexy. After this I had less shifty than before to contend against my chronic trouble. All the natural attachants on the liver Disorder-namely, impaired digastion, impure bibod, and a general disarrangement of the body—added to my suffering. Remembering my age, I concluded that there was no help for me.

"I was persuaded by my ffreind, Mr. D. H. Hoag, to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Words cannot express how I replace at the providence that led me to do so, for my liver trouble is cared. My appetite is good. I digest my food and enjoy refreshing rest. I feel as youthful as a man can at my age."
